WE are in a world order where old models are fast becoming obsolete. In the knowledge economy, the most precious asset is human capital. Given that backdrop, the budget is forward-looking and comprehensively addresses the needs of a knowledge-based economy where skills and innovation are the primary drivers. This would require the workforce developing an appreciation of the changing dynamics of innovation and attaining technological maturity.

The Budget has set in motion the right message, right incentives and the right environment for training and innovation to facilitate improved productivity.
